Last meetings of The Fashions in Living - Interior Decoration lectures, at The Cleveland Museum of Art will be Wednesday, April 9 at 10.30 a.m. and 8.15 p.m. also televised WXEL 4.30 p.m. William Pahlmann, past president of The American Institute of Decorators, speaks on "Decorating Today." He brings with him from New York his new color movie on the subject, not yet equipped with sound, to be supplied by his commentating.

Coming from Texas, Mr. Pahlmann graduated from and taught in The Parsons School of Design in New York. He did a series of rooms for Lord and Taylor which had a world effect upon interior decoration. In three years in the war he won the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, and at the end of it, became Decoration Editor of Harper's Bazaar, from which he resigned to found William Pahlmann Associates in New York. He decorates important houses, stores and offices in this country and Canada and locally is best known for his decoration of the Bonwit Teller, for whom he has also designed in New York, Boston, and Chicago.

His lectures will be free to the public.
